

College Knowledge & scholarships

I work in the field of higher education as a Cooperative Extension Agent for Washington State University. In this capacity I advise students and their families on preparatory strategies for getting into top schools like WSU and how to position themselves for the scholarships which makes it possible to afford to attend them.

I am especially active in helping low-income families. My underlying belief is that education builds an enfranchised citizenship. In working to change the modern paradigm of higher education, I am also of the belief that college is not about jobs; it is about careers and about gaining a deeper understanding of the human condition. Mysteries of the FAFSA, Admission Director profiles and building good GPAs will be revealed. To date, I have helped to generate well over a million dollars in scholarship and grant offers. At any given folk festival I have found this topic is always on somebody's mind and I take great delight in providing informal workshops on this topic after normal music class times are over. I find if information about this other part of my professional life is made available to the festival attendees, they tend to avail themselves of it. Recommended for anyone of any age who sees some kind of higher education pursuit in the near future. No limit.
